

The Forest Fire Law

The Forest Fire Law allows the burning of yard and household debris without a permit anytime the ground is snow covered, or when the burning is done in an approved burner of metal or masonry, with a metal cover having openings no larger than 3/4 inch.

Campfires will be allowed with a burning permit only. Campfires are to take the necessary precautions; clear the area around the fire; have it attended at all times and douse it thoroughly with water.

Careless campers are liable for damages caused by their fires, according to the DNR.
